Paris Fashion Makers List New Trends

By NAEANE WALKER

PARIS (AP)—Whistle-bait necklines, hardly any waistlines and a choice of two hemlines—short or medium—that's what the Paris fashion makers have to offer for the coming winter.

One American buyer happily remarked, "These clothes will sell." The sheath is undisputed queen of fashion. But for cocktail and evening there are puffed bell shapes as well.

It is a predominately black season, with blue in second place, followed by bright red, coral pinks and green.

As usual, Dior's opening climaxed the week of openings. His "Spindle Line," with loose waist and tapered-in hem, was spiced up with some of the lowest necklines that have ever raised fashion writers' eyebrows.

About half the dress houses plumped for very short skirts, barely covering the knee. Among them were Patou, Heim, Lenoir, Castillo, Cardin and—according to buyers who saw them—Balmain, Givenchy, in the mid-calf or conservative school were Dior, Balmain, Dreesse, Griffe and Laroche, plus Chanel, of course.

While sheaths were sometimes completely unwaisted, gripping the hip and hugging the legs, more often they were tucked in on the tummy and loose or paneled behind.

Details that turned up all over included bows, dark discreet plaids, scarf necklines for coats and jackets, extremely long or quite short suit jackets, big fur collars, spotted furs, wiglike hats covering all the hair, wool fringe trim, and lampshade skirts for cocktail time.

Opening the season, Patou showed a short-skirted, busy sheath, and a favored daytime ensemble of woolen dress with short hip-tight jacket, bundled over with a fur-lined coat to match. Bows abounded.

Larvin headlined hips in a panier or basket-skirted collection with yet more bows. Pierre Cardin's "Lasso Line," with loopy drapery and low kangaroo pouches, featured chiffon dresses draped between the knees. His skirts were the shortest and lightest of the season.

Hungary Hits at Catholic Church Group

BUDAPEST (AP)—Hungary's Communist government struck out today at opponents in the Roman Catholic Church, announcing the arrest of what it called a "major" group of counterrevolutionary priests.

The Interior Ministry in a statement also accused Josef Cardinal Mindszenty of being a "major" group of counterrevolutionary priests. The statement charged the cardinal's secretary, the Rev. Albert Egon Turcsanyi, "took part in the leading at the head of an armed group."

"They shipped the secret documents to Mindszenty," the ministry said.

The Budapest press reported previously that Father Turcsanyi is in jail.

The statement said the group of "looters" also included Istvan Tardos, a fourth-year theological student; Pal Lieszkovsky, identified as a lieutenant colonel under the dictatorship of pro-Nazi Admiral Horthy; Father Imre Vargu; Antal Kukla and "several other priests."

The total number arrested was not announced. The statement said they would go on trial "shortly" in Budapest Municipal Court.

Cardinal Mindszenty, convicted of treason by the Communist regime and sentenced to life imprisonment, was released last Oct. 31 by the anti-Soviet rebels and received a "humiliating" welcome back to Budapest. He took refuge in the American legation Nov. 4 and the Soviet troops and tanks opened up on the "rebels" to crush the revolt.

Since then Premier János Kadar's government has accused him frequently of interfering against the Red regime but has made no attempt to get him out of the legation.

The announcement said the rebel priests had their headquarters at the Central Theological Seminary in Budapest. Their activities were said to have started before the outbreak last October and to have become "very great" at that time.

A shipment of 17 registered American Brahman cattle recently culled in Bangkok, Thailand. The cattle were from Louisiana and Texas.

rears in developing a civil defense program. He said that the Springfield mayor presumably was invited for the progress made by the city.

Shelton has an auxiliary police force of 40 men, an auxiliary fire department of 27 men, 40 women trained in mass feeding techniques and a rescue unit.

The curvy coat and the shorter jacket are making fur fashion news this fall. Great coat (left) in black persian lamb has deep dolman sleeves to create a curved look at the top of the coat. Sleeves are a part of the full cape back. Flat pockets are bound in velvet. Hip bone jacket in autumn haze mink (center) has curvy fullness at top that tapers down and becomes narrow. Half-belt is set in at bottom of jacket. Luxurious jacket of white beaver offers the opulence of fur trim on top (right). It's bordered in dark ranch mink. Sleeves are cut, dolman style. These designs are by Schiaparelli.

DOROTHY DIX

Husband's Job Comes Before Ma's Wishes

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm torn between mother and husband. The doctor advised my mother to move to a warmer climate which she has done. She does miss me, she is constantly asking me to move nearer to her. My husband has a good job here, so have I, and we own a lovely home. Should I ask my husband to make the move so I can be near my mother? L. T.

Dear L. T.: If your husband would like a change, suggest it. If he is too well-established where he is, it would be most unfair to ask him to pull up stakes. Visit your mom as often as possible, write, phone, send little gifts, particularly home-made goodies. If she's in good hands, you cannot do more.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I know this isn't your line, but I don't know where else to get the information I want. Would you mind stretching a point and giving it to me? I'm curious about the charming Lennon sisters who sing on Lawrence Welk's program. Which is the oldest girl? I think it's the one with the pony tail. MRS. F. L.

Dear Mrs. F. L.: From the wide variety of questions that come to me, I guess anything is "my line." I've been asked—and answered—such assorted questions as to the whereabouts of Barbara Hutton, Bing Crosby and Bob Hope, the care and feeding of African violets and the hows and wherefores of marketing a beauty salve.

You're quite right about Dianne Lennon. She's 17, and has the pony tail. The others are adorable Janet, 11; Kathy (who stands at the left), 13; and Peggy, 15. I share your enthusiasm for these talented youngsters. They're great.

Dear Dorothy Dix: If one wants to be a godparent, should she ask the mother or wait until the mother asks her? A. O.

Dear A. O.: Please, wait to be asked. It's a great honor to sponsor a child in baptism, and the parents should approach you. If they pass you by, there may be reasons why another person is asked before you.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I notice my husband noticing other women. We've been married 20 years and I never saw him look at another woman. Now he stares at very young girl he sees. Do I have anything to worry about, or is this natural for a man 32 years of age? GRETA

Dear Greta: My dear, it's natural for any man from 12 to 100. What have you been noticing all these years while hubby has taken furtive glances at the opposite sex?

James H. Robertson, Guest Speaker, Rotary Club

James H. Robertson, Minister, First Presbyterian Church was speaker at the Rotary Club at their regular meeting Tuesday at the Lawson Hotel. His subject was the Four Object of Rotary. Mr. Robertson devoted some time to the subject of development of acquaintances as the opportunity for service. He gave a general discussion on the high ethical standards, its worthiness of all useful occupations, and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his occupation as an opportunity to serve society. Many Bible quotations were used in the discussion of this point. He stressed the application of ideal service by every rotarian to his personal, business and community life. He also devoted some time to the subject of the advancement of international understanding, good will, and peace through a world of fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service. His address was received with much interest.

Mrs. Halston Entertains Contrast Club

The home of Mrs. Frank Halston was beautifully decorated with arrangements of summer flowers on Tuesday afternoon when she entertained members of the Contrast Club at a dinner-bridge. The four tables were covered with linen cloths and centered with baby's breaths.

The high score prize was won by Mrs. Bob Reynolds. Club guests included Mrs. E. R. Ward, Mrs. Jack Robey, Mrs. Bob Yarborough, Mrs. B. A. DeLamar, Mrs. H. H. McKenzie, Mrs. Edward Bryson, Mrs. Julia Gann, Mrs. Charles Scott and Mrs. Rev. John McRae.

Mrs. Don Salter, Tommy and Miriam of Bossier City, La., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McRae.

Horse Drags Son of Baroness to Death

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP)—The 8-year-old son of former Baroness Waltraine Van Heeckeren of the Netherlands was thrown and dragged to death yesterday by a high-spirited Arabian horse.

A collar heard the desperate screams of the child, Brian C. Shanley, and his mother, now Mrs. Edmund Michael Shanley.

Lucy Finally Has 'Struck Out'

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. (AP)—There is no joy in Rutgers—Lucy has struck out.

Lucy is the hen that startled the feathered set last week by laying 17 eggs in a five-day period.

Well, you can imagine what happened thereafter. From an unnamed hen in a flock of several hundred owned by John Delaporte of Reville, she leaped to fame. She got a name, Delaporte grew proud of her, and the scientific world took over.

The 2-year-old Leghorn was brought to the Rutgers University agriculture experiment station Monday for Dr. Paul D. Sturkie, poultry physiologist, to study.

Sturkie wanted to see what made Lucy play such a wonderful shell game. She had laid three eggs on two days, four on two days, and with Delaporte, keeping watch to make certain no prankster was spoiling him, three on the fifth day.

Well, higher education didn't agree with Lucy. And Rutgers officials said yesterday that she hadn't laid a single egg since she arrived. Hadn't even formed an egg, in fact.

When she does, Sturkie will take X-rays to see if she has two oviduct instead of the usual one. He thinks it's possible because some of the eggs have had a roundish shape, others a longish appearance.

But until she lays, Lucy's reputation is pretty foul around here.

Marilyn Monroe Loses Baby

NEW YORK (AP)—Glamorous Marilyn Monroe, wife of playwright Arthur Miller, lost her baby by an operation last night in Doctors Hospital, a medical source reported today.

"The baby was unsavable and it was urgent to protect the life of the mother," said the source who declined use of his name.

The operation followed a fast ambulance trip yesterday from the Millers' summer home at Amagansett on the eastern end of Long Island.

When she was admitted to the hospital one of her doctors said Miss Monroe was "five or six weeks pregnant and is expecting her child at the end of March."

There have been persistent rumors she was expecting a child. She was wheeled from the ambulance in a stretcher. A sheet covered her famous body. Only her tousled blonde hair, her bare, sun-tanned feet and the top of her blue pajama sleeves were visible.

ADD STATE NEWS BRIEFS

FAYETTEVILLE (AP)—Rev. J. H. Hays, pastor of the First Baptist Church, has made a gift of $4,000 to the College of Engineering of the University of Arkansas. Dean George F. Branigan announced yesterday.

EL DORADO (AP)—Roy C. Benedict has retired after nearly 51 years as a railroad man on the old Arkansas Southern Railroad and later the Rock Island Lines. An engineer for Rock Island since 1907, Benedict estimated that he traveled at least a million miles on the rails.

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gen. Carlos Romulo, Philippine ambassador to the United Nations, will address the annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans here Sept. 16. It was announced yesterday.

LAKE VILLAGE (AP)—Orby Shaver, 41, of Chicago died yesterday at a Lake Village hospital of injuries he suffered last Tuesday when his pickup truck and a truck-trailer collided on U.S. Highway 82. Survivors include the widow and four sons.

The player made a flying tackle and stopped the horse, but the boy was dead.

TV Is Easier for Men Says Georgia Gibbs

By Charles Mercer

NEW YORK (AP)—Men performers have it much easier than women on television, says Georgia Gibbs, the girl who has launched a delightful new program of songs on NBC-TV Monday evenings.

"A man just puts on a tux or a dark suit and goes before the cameras," she said. "But a woman has so many problems. What clothes will she wear? How will she fix her hair? Is her makeup right? It seems to me I spend three days a week fussing over my clothes for a 15-minute show."

Because of the care with which she selects her clothing "I strive for simplicity," viewers don't realize she is only five feet. But the home audience has discovered she can sing anything: ballads or blues, beguines or rock 'n' roll, and she can belt them or sing them sweet.

Georgia began singing in a Worcester, Mass., movie house when she was 11 years old, the youngest of four children of a widowed mother. Two years later she lied about her age and began touring with small bands, sometimes traveling 400 miles between one-night stands.

"Those were the important years," she recalls. "On the road it was lonelier than it can ever be again. Those years are lost. But singing the way I did then—sometimes 50 or 60 songs a night—that's real solid training."

When she felt she was ready for the big plunge, she came to New York and competed with 150 other singers for a vocal pot on the Jimmy Durante radio show, landing the job. After that she appeared with such stars as Danny Kaye, Eddie Cantor, Bob Hope and Milton Berle. Her big break came with her 13th recording, "Kiss of Fire," which sold over a million.

After that hit the offers for singing engagements poured in from clubs in both this country and Europe.

Acting Mayor Tells Wedding Plans

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Acting Mayor Lee H. Evans didn't have much official business to handle today so he took time out to tell reporters that he and his sister-in-law plan to be married.

Evans, a widower, and Mrs. Reba Perry Evans of Little Rock will be married on Sept. 1 at a "modest" church here, Evans said.

Evans is the widow of Evans' brother, Ernest A. Evans, who died in 1932.

Mrs. Evans is the mother of eight children; Evans, the father of four.

Evans, a veteran alderman, is acting mayor in the absence of Mayor Woodrow W. Mann.

Pro Football to Recognize Player Union

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Football League players union, hardly out of infancy, enjoyed unexpected recognition today. But it still faced uncertainties in getting along with pro football management.

Officials of nine clubs voiced approval when NFL Commissioner Bert Bell announced yesterday he would recognize and negotiate with the recently created NFL Players Assn.

Spokesman for three others didn't condemn Bell's action—but neither did they do handclaps as a result of it.

Bell chose a House Antitrust Subcommittee hearing as the scene of his announcement.

Failure to recognize and bargain collectively with the players' organization would be "against the best interest of the National Football League and the public," he said.

The subcommittee is investigating football and other professional team sports to determine whether they should be immune from federal antitrust laws. Past refusal of NFL club owners to accept the players' association had nettled several lawmakers, including Subcommittee Chairman Celler (D-N.Y.), Rep. Keating (R-N.Y.) and Rep. Rodino (D-N.J.). They commended Bell's decision.

Creighton Miller, the ex-Notre Dame backfield star who is now attorney for the association, said he was "most gratified" a long as Bell was empowered to speak for the league.

Bragan Clowns His Disgust With Umpires

By CHUCK CAPALDO
MILWAUKEE (AP)—Manager Bobby Bragan of Pittsburgh apparently bent on bringing to a head his running feud with an umpiring team headed by Frak Dascoli, sauntered onto the field during last night's Pirates-Braves game sipping orange soda through a straw.

The stumpy, gum-chewing skipper of the seventh-place Buccos took his unscheduled stroll in the fifth inning minutes after being banished by Umpire Stan Landes for holding his nose to show how he felt about one of Landes' calls.

A County Stadium crowd of 24,522, at first stunned by Bragan's antics, guffawed as he offered each of the four men in blue a sip from a pint carton of orange drink.

"It was my major league debut as a clown," Bragan said afterward in the clubhouse. "I'm fed up with these guys. They won't even listen to a legitimate complaint."

"He's a buster, a clown and a comedian," Dascoli said heatedly while trying without much success to keep his meditations in check.

By pulling that stunt he vindicates anything that ever happened to him."

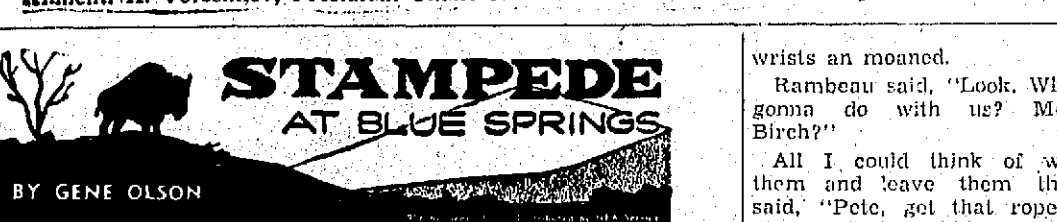

It was Bragan's second brush with Dascoli. Landes, Frank Secor and Bill Baker in as many nights. His first, which occurred Tuesday night when he wired National League President Warren Giles a request that Dascoli's team be "broken up" and absorbed by three other crews, hadn't even run its course.

Before last night's game Bragan, who pulled some zany stunts during his minor league managerial career, such as taking a nap at home plate, said he hadn't received Giles' reply to his telegram.

But, in a statement issued in Cincinnati, Giles said: "I will tell him we appreciate his interest but we and not the managers must decide on the makeup of the various umpire teams."

MOVES ON THE RED CHECKERBOARD—So you can see at a glance the basic maneuvers of the complicated Communist power game, here are the key personalities and their status after the recent Kremlin purge. They are Nikita Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Communist party; Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov, Defense Minister; Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, Premier, and Marshal Kliment K. Voroshilov, Presidium Chairman or "President" of the U.S.S.R.

THE STORY: Marshal Harney time to rescue Pete Dorsey, his prisoner who was kidnapped in Blue Springs. Pete may be lynched by the Clements for being a coward, which resulted in the death of Barney Jethro. Now Cole Jethro, Barney's brother, is in town, and there is nothing to delay the lynching. Pike Ambrose has set out to follow a man who may know where Dorsey is held.

CHAPTER XVII

The noise of horses moving on the trail came closer. Then I saw gray spots moving through the dark and I knew it was Birch's pilot leading the way down the ravine. I held Pilot's nose to keep him quiet. Then I saw the shape of a man on the pinto and the trailing pack horse. I edged away from the busines as the pinto came below me on the trail.

"Hold up, Birch," I said, surprised how loud my voice came off the slopes.

I heard him grab a breath. I moved up fast before he got a notion to run and the pinto jumped aside when I brushed his shoulder. I grabbed his bridle and stuck my rifle up into Birch's face.

"What?"

It wasn't Birch. It was Carl Rambeau, one of the Clements' cooks. "Get down, Carl," I said.

Carl got down and edged near, trying to pick out my face. I tipped my head away. No need to tell him who it was. More than likely he'd find out soon enough.

"You take me to the cave where Dorsey is," I said, trying to sound all business.

"What cave? Who are you?"

I nudged his belly with the rifle. It was a mistake. I saw his shoulders hunch when he made my grab. I saw it just early enough to pull the rifle aside. I felt his hand hit and slide off the barrel. I ducked and his fist hit the top of my head and knocked my hat off. I heard the horses start and one of them brushed against me. Rambeau's weight hung on me and I couldn't get my arms loose. In close under him, I swung the rifle hard. I heard the solid smack of the barrel against the side of his head. He dropped like a stone.

I stood over him, sucking air. I heart stomping against my ribs. Then I heard horses running on the trail below. I jerked around. The pinto and pack horse were gone.

I knew I might need one of those horses but there was nothing to do about it. I waited for Rambeau to come alive.

I walked around in the dark until I found my hat. I went to Rambeau to check him for guns. He had a .45 in his belt. I pulled it and threw it up the slope. I fanned Rambeau's face with my hat, trying to bring him around. Leaning over him, I saw the blood on his head. I'd hit him a hard as I could. I remembered, and it worried me. But finally he stirred and opened his mouth.

Then his eyes came open and his hand moved to his face. He felt the blood and sat up fast. I held the rifle down where he could get a good look but not so close he could grab again. But I knew I didn't have time to shoot him.

If he went for it. I said, "Take me to the cave." Rambeau stood up and rubbed at his face with his handanna. I could see that he was scared and I liked that. I didn't care much whether he was scared of me or of what the Clements would do when they found out. Something pressed into the middle of my back and I jumped about a foot off the ground and then I saw it was only Pilot, dragging his reins.

"Get going," I said. Rambeau turned and started up the trail. I stayed right close, leading Pilot. I thought about what was coming and made up my mind.

"Listen, Carl. At the cave, you call Birch, get him out. Anybody else, you get him out, too."

Rambeau turned halfway to me and didn't say anything. It looked to me like he would do it. I nudged his back with the rifle barrel just to remind him and then I pulled away before he got another notion. We moved up the trail and Rambeau stopped at about the place I thought he would. He looked at me and pointed to the cave, just a thick black mark on the slope 30 feet up.

I whispered, "Sing out."

Rambeau waited. I nudged him with the rifle. He called, "Birch, come out. This is Carl. Come out here!"

Then a man stepped out of the cave.

I said, "Down here to the trail, Birch. Drop your gun and come down. Make a wrong move and I'll kill you."

For a minute, Birch just stood. Then he started down. He said, "Guns in the cave." His voice was sad and tired. He didn't seem surprised at all. Down on the trail, he looked hard at me and then at Rambeau. He said, "What happened, Carl?"

"Caught me down the ravine," Carl said.

Birch turned back to me. "Might as well shoot. Our hides ain't worth a sack of chips now."

I kept my eyes and the rifle on him. I called, "Pete! Pete Dorsey! You come on and I'll take you to town."

Nothing happened. I said, "He lied?"

Birch nodded. I called, "Pete! Come out! It's safe!"

I didn't know what else to do. I didn't want to leave Birch and Carl. I couldn't send either of them back up on account of that gun in there. If we all went, this might jump me in the cave. It made me sick to think I'd got this far and had to stop.

CHAPTER XVIII

Then somebody came out of the cave, rolling over and over down the slope. He hit the trail and stopped rolling. He twisted his neck to get a look at me. It was Dorsey, all right.

Dorsey said, his voice thin and dry. "What you, Blanchard?"

"Thank God," Dorsey said, his voice trailing to a whisper. I struck me strange, there in the dark on the trail, that Dorsey would be glad to go back to Blanchard and a long time in prison. I got my bone-handled knife out of the saddle and out Dorsey looked at the wrists and ankles. He stood up and stretched and rubbed his wrists and moaned. Rambeau said, "Look. What you gonna do with us? Me and Birch?"

All I could think of was tie them and leave them there. I said, "Pete, get that rope I cut off you and rawhide off my saddle. Tie this pair."

"Look," Rambeau said, excited. "You leave us here and we're good as dead. You let us go and we'll head out south to the breaks. Maybe catch that pinto and the pack horse. Then, by golly, we'll slope out of the country."

"I know he was right. Leaving them there for the Clements to find was like shooting them with the Springfield in my hand. Ammouned to the same. But if they didn't head out, instead turned back to town."

Birch said, "We got to pull out, kid. You can see that. You got what you want. Don't help none to kill us."

"Head out," I said. "Much obliged," Birch said. They moved off down the trail. Rambeau leading at a trot and soon they were lost in the dark. I stood listening until their foot-steps faded, then I turned to Dorsey.

"Let's move," I said. I couldn't see much of Dorsey in the dark and I didn't especially care to. I knew it was Dorsey and that's all I cared. I moved out north up the trail, leading Pilot. Dorsey walked alongside, still breathing like he couldn't get enough air. Every now and then he'd laugh a little, deep in his throat, and I knew it was just the good feeling bubbling out. I figured we could walk as fast up out of the ravine as we could hide double and I wanted to save Pilot.

Moving through the dark ravine, it came to me what I'd done. I had Pete Dorsey, alive and well, and I was taking him back to Blue Springs and I was going to walk right up to Blanchard and say, "Harney, here's that little old fellow you been looking for." And when Blanchard got his breath and he asked how I managed it, I'd say, "Just went out and took him away from a couple of bad hombres and brought him back. About all there was to it." I sure would be something to see Blanchard's face when I said that.

Then I wondered if I'd been a little careless with Pete. If he might cut and run if he got the chance. I decided he wouldn't. It seemed to me that what he wanted more than anything else was to have Blanchard right close by him again, at least until he got out of Clements' country.

I got up on Pilot and helped Dorsey up behind. We headed down the slope, Dorsey hanging on around my waist until he liked to choke the breath out of me. I angled Pilot down the slope and held him back until we got near the bottom. Then he broke into a hard run and I let him go. Dorsey laughed loud. It was the happiest sound I ever heard but I hated the way it seemed to reach out into the night.

I pulled Pilot down and he was soon willing to walk. I was glad that neither of us was a heavy man. I let my eyes range the basin and I told Dorsey to keep a lookout, too. After that, I didn't hear him chuckle any more and his breath shortened up. He said,

Director for Children Once a Child Star

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—One of the best directors of children in the business today is a onetime child star—Sidney Miller.

Sidney, now directing for Walt Disney on both movies and TV (The directs the Mousketeers), appeared in better than 300 movies, from the first talkies onward.

Before that, he had worked on the Children's Hour, a famous radio program, in New York City.

"My mother and I used take the train every Sunday from our home town of Shenandoah, Pa., to New York. One day a Warner's talent scout said Hollywood was looking for young boys for 'Penrod and Sam.'"

"So mother and I came out on the train to Hollywood. I carried my guitar all the way. We arrived here and I went to the casting office myself. I can remember the casting director asking me what my name was."

"Instead of answering, I whipped out the guitar and started singing. For some strange reason, she said she had a part for me. It was as a Catholic altar boy in a religious procession scene."

"I carried the crucifix at the head of the procession and kept thinking how I had just had my Bar Mitzvah a few weeks previously."

He got the part in "Penrod and Sam" too, and from there went into many notable pictures, such as the "Mickey McGire" series with Mickey Rooney and later "Boy's Town" with Rooney.

Sidney also recalls another series he played in for Educational Pictures, a studio no longer in existence.

"The stars were Junior Coughlin and me. Then they added a cute three-year-old girl as Junior's kid sister. She was really cute and I can remember the director and the producer arguing."

"The director wanted to put the kid under contract at $50 a week. The producer couldn't see it. He said, 'Another year and the kid will grow out of that cuteness.'"

Before she had grown out of it some ten years later, she had made herself and the old Fox Studio millions of dollars. The cute little kid, of course, was Shirley Temple.

He says there are no more ruthless directors like some of the old timers. One famous case involved Jackie Cooper who was supposed to cry in an important scene. The director got an Academy Award performance out of the kid by telling him that his pet dog had just been run over by a truck.

Sidney says kid actors are so well trained now that all you have to do is suggest the page number of Stanislavsky's crying instructions.
